Safer Neighborhoods through Precision Policing Initiative: Atlanta Police Department

INTRODUCTION

The Atlanta Police Department (APD) is one of 15 departments selected to participate in the Safer Neighborhoods through Precision Policing Initiative (SNPPI). SNPPI provides policy review, assessments, training, and technical assistance to a cohort of law enforcement agencies across the nation. The four goals of the initiative are to: (1) identify promising strategies that reduce crime; (2) protect officers’ safety and wellness; (3) produce productive interagency partnerships with law enforcement and community stakeholders; and (4) implement innovative and effective technologies to help police departments safeguard neighborhoods. SNPPI began under the leadership of Chief George Turner (Ret.) and is currently being led by Chief Erika Shields. The purpose of this report is to highlight APD’s accomplishments in the Initiative’s four goals and describe promising practices for consideration by agencies nationwide.

METHODOLOGY

Each of the 15 selected departments is assigned a CNA Strategic Site Coordinator (SSC) and a CNA operations analyst to assist with planning, implementation, coordination, and delivery of technical assistance. CNA worked with the Atlanta Police Department to develop a customized strategy to capitalize on the great work already in progress across the four initiative goals. First, we looked at APD’s policies and practices related to: crime reduction efforts, policy effectiveness, technological capabilities, training priorities, and officer safety and wellness strategies. The CNA team then helped identify training and technical assistance (TTA) opportunities, additional tools, and resources to enhance areas related to the principles of precision policing. The CNA team documented APD’s implementation efforts throughout the initiative; lessons learned from SNPPI are contained in this report.

BACKGROUND

Encompassing 133.2 square miles, the city of Atlanta is the capital and the most populous city in the state of Georgia, with a population of approximately 440,640 people. APD has an authorized strength of 2,000 officers. Since the inauguration of SNPPI, APD has set in motion numerous strategies to address violent crime, address public safety issues, initiate meaningful partnerships, and further enhance the department.

Overall, APD saw an 8% decrease in part 1 crimes for 2017.

CRIME RATES AND TRENDS IN ATLANTA

Reducing violent crime in Atlanta is APD’s top priority. In 2017, APD saw a 28-percent drop in homicides, from 110 in 2016 to 79; and a 26-percent drop in robbery from 1,910 in 2016 to 1,412 in 2017. Overall, APD saw an 8-percent decrease in part 1 crimes for the 2017.

CRIME REDUCTION: PROMISING STRATEGIES

Federal, state, and local partnerships

APD’s Narcotics Unit works closely with its local High-Intensity Drug Trafficking Area (HIDTA) and the United States Attorney’s Office to address and investigate illicit narcotics trafficking and distribution in the city. This collaborative effort allows for aggressive responses to and investigations of organized drug trade organizations that operate nationwide. This is a sustaining partnership that meets on a monthly basis and focuses on opioids, harnessing data from opioid over-dose deaths to lead to arrest and prosecution of perpetrators selling heroin.

Drug Market Intervention

APD implemented the Drug Market Intervention (DMI) strategy within the English Avenue neighborhood to combat open-air heroin drug sales. DMI targets overt drug markets with the goal of eliminating them and improving life for residents of the surrounding communities. Overt drug markets operate in public, bringing chaos, violence, and enormous damage to communities. The DMI strategy involves identifying specific drug markets and street-level dealers to make arrests of violent offenders. Officers and prosecutors work together to develop prosecutable drug cases for nonviolent dealers and agree to suspend prosecution for individuals who agree to
OFFICER SAFETY AND WELLNESS

The APD values all aspects of officer wellness and safety—safety in the field, mental health, and leadership development. APD regularly conducts health and wellness events, including a symposium on Officers Wellness in partnership with the Atlanta Police Foundation at Morehouse College. This one-day symposium fostered candid conversations about officer wellness and safety. It took place on the Morehouse College campus and featured free health screenings, health-related programs and workshops, activities for families, fun games, a marching band, and healthy food market shopping.

The APD requires a variety of training initiatives both at the recruit level and through its Professional Development Unit to promote safety and wellness. Stress management training is provided to recruits in conjunction with instruction on how to access the Employee Assistance Program (EAP). In addition to the two hours of Health and Wellness lessons taught at the recruit level, APD offers an expanded Health and Wellness class (24 hours) to all sworn officers. The EAP staff has requested a clinician to be assigned to the Training Academy to develop expanded Health and Wellness training and provide stress inoculation and test anxiety during training in order to all aspects of training.

The City of Atlanta recently instituted a citywide initiative in the form of a drop-in health care center, which opened last year. APD is participating in the city’s “Wellness Wednesdays” program, which encourages city employees to engage in healthy behaviors, such as getting flu shots. The new drop-in health center enables officers to get flu shots quickly and conveniently.

Atlanta Police Leadership Institute

Regarded as the most robust law enforcement leadership program in the country, the Atlanta Police Leadership Institute (APLI) is building the leadership capacity of the APD. APLI is a groundbreaking program established by the Atlanta Police Foundation in partnership with Georgia State University. As the expectation of police leaders continues to increase, so does the importance of this much-needed program.

The five-tier, leadership-focused curriculum is designed to develop a well-rounded understanding of APD operations and prepares mid-level leaders to manage confidently and efficiently the challenges facing today’s law enforcement community. Officers who participate in APLI gain valuable skills in policy development, process improvement and mission-critical program design as they work through complicated public safety issues.

ESTABLISHING INTERAGENCY PARTNERSHIPS

Strategies for Policing Innovation

APD participates in the federally supported Strategies for Policing Innovation (SPI), a project in which the department partners with Grady Hospital to implement a hospital-based retaliatory violence-prevention project. As the locations where many victims of violence seek medical treatment, hospitals and health care systems are uniquely positioned to address violence prevention. The partnership between APD and Grady Hospital focuses on identifying high-risk youth and young adults injured by violent acts and drug use within targeted zip codes and providing them with intensive, individualized case-management services. Participants receive risk-reduction assessments through community-based resources. In addition, the partnership engages community members to promote awareness of their roles in stemming the violence within their communities. The hospital implements prevention strategies immediately after the time of injury. APD has assigned two community officers to the project; the officers serve as a conduit for communication among investigators, victims, and community members.

HOPE Team

APD’s Homeless Outreach Prevention Emergency (HOPE) Team Unit won the 2014 Georgia Crisis Intervention Team Leadership Award, recognizing its use of best practices in addressing homelessness in Atlanta. In partnership with the United Way of Greater Atlanta, Hands-On Atlanta, and the Atlanta Downtown Improvement District, the HOPE Team works with people who are homeless and/or have mental illness. Team members help homeless individuals identify short- or long-term housing options. The unit connects homeless individuals to services by partnering with a host of agencies like Gateway, United Way, Salvation Army, the Veterans Administration, and the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) Georgia chapter. The HOPE unit and its partners have significantly reduced homeless-related incidents by more than 5,000 and created enhanced Information sharing that has played a pivotal role in crime reduction for APD.

Community Councils

Each police district has established a community council to address crime problems in its neighborhoods; the councils bring together both police and community perspectives. The councils are tasked with identifying resources and strategies to promote public safety, including calling in tips, participating in the neighborhood watch program, or walking the beat with officers. Neighborhoods determine how to measure the success of their initiatives. The program has been successful throughout the city in linking citizens with local government agencies to reduce crime through actions such as improved lighting and trash removal.

At-Promise Youth and Community Center

The At-Promise Youth and Community Center opened its doors on August 1, 2017. The Center is a state-of-the-art learning and community facility with specialized services for youth and a gathering place for residents, group activities, and other
The guiding principles of 21st Century Policing helped us make significant strides in re-building bridges with the communities we serve that had been strained by so many unfortunate events across our nation. Today, we are undoubtedly a more transparent, responsive and attentive department than we’ve ever been. Maintaining the public trust is a never-ending mission, and we have a great opportunity to continue our momentum through Safer Neighborhoods through Precision Policing.
